Staying Active Even When It's Winter

As the new year arrives, many will have goals of becoming more active, but they find it difficult to stay motivated. You are not alone. A survey from the University of Southern California showed 32% of Americans say they are exercising less than before the pandemic.

Incorporating physical activity into your day has many benefits including help with weight loss, immune system boost, stress relief and feeling better. The goal is to get 150 minutes of activity each week.

While it can be hard to stay motivated, here are some tips to help you meet your activity goals.

Make a plan. Figure out when you can incorporate physical activity into your week. The 150 minutes of weekly recommended physical activity can be broken down into 30 minutes over five days or even smaller increments throughout the day. The important thing is to move, even if it is for 10 minutes at a time. If you are not sure how to fit physical activity into your schedule, log how you spend your time each day, so you can see where exercise might fit. Once you have a schedule, develop a backup plan to catch up in case you cannot exercise at your regular time. Activities such as walking or climbing stairs require no equipment and can be done indoors, if the weather is nasty.

Find something you enjoy doing. Research shows that people who enjoy their physical activity have a better chance of sticking with it. Also, your activity does not have to be difficult to have a positive effect. It could be as simple as walking around your neighborhood or dancing to music each day.

If students were riding the school bus to our office, they will instead take their normal bus home or be picked up by adults at their school. For snow after school is dismissed, contact your club leader for more details.

Volunteers Needed

There are several projects that typically start in January and February that need additional adults to help plan and conduct the programs. Volunteer leaders are essential to providing diverse activities allowing youth to gain project skills.

For these projects, we cannot offer these in Green County without an adult volunteer who is willing to be trained and assist with the project. We are flexible on the dates/times but a minimum of six hours of education is required for the youth. We can provide training and resources to help with the projects. If you are interested, please reach out to the 4-H office; we can discuss the expectations in more detail.

Shooting Sports

There are five disciplines in the shooting sports program: Rifle and Pistol (air/.22), Archery, Shotgun, and Black Powder. Each discipline must have a trained, certified instructor.

Horse / Livestock / Dogs

To offer programs in livestock (ham, sheep, pig, beef, dairy, goats, or poultry), dog or horse programs, we are required to have a certified leader in that species.

Make Bird Suet

Birds may need extra food to survive winter. Suet is an easy way to provide food while attracting them to your backyard. The Audubon Society has easy to follow directions to make your own suet using common items at www.audubon.org/news/make-your-own-suet. After making the suet, 4-H'ers can identify the birds that come to your feeder. Stop by the 4-H office to receive your free Bird Identification poster.

Can you identify these three birds? Call the 4-H office by January 30 with the names of these three birds to be eligible for a 4-H prize!
